

Quenched discharge (spark) — for contrast with muon tracks

A discharge fires 591 strips at once across the full 40 cm plane — unmistakably different from a muon track.
The resistive strips quench it within a single readout window.